Representatives From 4 Counties Form 7th District Organization

TO AID STATE GROUP
Plans Are Discussed for Annual Arkansas Livestock Show

Representatives from Clark, Nevada, Hempstead and Lafayette counties attended the district meeting of the Arkansas Livestock Show Association at the city hall Friday and perfected the organization of these four counties into the 7th district, by the election of the following officers: W. Kendall Lemley, district chairman, Hope, Ark.

Ardis E. Pittman, vice chairman, Prescott, Ark.
The chairman was instructed to select a secretary to assist him in the organization of the district.

Plan Is Explained
After a talk by A. P. Bales, assistant general livestock agent, of the Missouri-Pacific railroad, on the plans and purposes of the Arkansas Livestock Show Association, a temporary organization was formed by the election of Ardis E. Pittman as chairman and D. M. Vaughn of Prescott as secretary.

The Arkansas Livestock Show Association is planning to inaugurate an annual livestock show in Little Rock, October 11 to 15, where $50,000 worth of prizes will be distributed to the growers of purebred livestock in Arkansas. Premiums will be offered on dairy and beef cattle, swine, poultry, horses, mules, sheep and goats.

Particular emphasis will be placed on boys and girls livestock show, which will feature 4-H clubs and vocational agricultural livestock exhibits. The meeting was well attended by twenty-five representatives from the four counties, all of whom contributed to the program enthusiastic suggestions for the promotion of this new feature of Arkansas development. A talk was made by H. A. Daugherty, of Arkadelphia, Tom McElaine, Jr., of Prescott, Judge J. W. Bradley of Prescott and several others of the visiting delegations.

Those attending the meeting are as follows:
The Delegation
Ashleigh P. Bales, Little Rock; Chas. A. Scott, Prescott; Frank C. Meyers, Prescott; Dr. B. H. Townsend, Prescott; S. H. Cadenhead, Prescott; W. S. Roe, Prescott; B. H. Scott, Prescott; Aubrey Albright, Hope; R. P. Bowen, Hope; Ben E. Rice, Lewisville; M. S. Bates, Hope; L. D. Jones, Arkadelphia; Clifford L. Smith, Hope; Wallace Taylor, Arkadelphia; S. D. Cook, Hope; A. T. Goodloe, Arkadelphia; Lee H. Garland, Hope; C. L. Rogers, Prescott; Clarence Hardin, Arkadelphia; Thos. C. McElaine, Jr., Prescott; H. A. Daugherty, Arkadelphia; E. N. McElaine, Jr., Prescott; W. H. Ross, Arkadelphia; E. B. Hall, Prescott; Joseph Calloway, Arkadelphia; J. W. Bradley, Prescott; D. M. Vaughn, Prescott; Ardis E. Pittman, Prescott.

"No Reason to Believe U. S. Law Violated," They Declare

NEW YORK (AP)—With indications that their interest in the 11-month-old disappearance of Mrs. Alice M. Parsons had ended, federal agents Friday unofficially ended their connection with the case, at least for the present.

Earl J. Connelley, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said: "There is no reason to believe that a federal statute has been violated in this case."

A hundred years ago, Greenwich Village, New York City, was a health resort.

DEAL AGAINST CZECHS

'Financial Probe' Veiled Attack on Press, Says Frank

Noted Educator-Editor in Federal Disfavor for His Criticism

"RIGHT TO THINK"
Rural Progress Magazine's Loss "Normal for New Publication"

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Glenn Frank charged Friday night that the Senate lobby committee's investigation of the magazine Rural Progress was part of a campaign of "terror and intimidation" against newspapers and magazines which criticize the New Deal.

Dr. Frank is editor of Rural Progress a Chicago farm publication, and also is chairman of the Republican Program Committee. He made his charge in a statement to the press shortly after the committee had refused him an opportunity to answer charges that the magazine was a propaganda medium financed by "great capitalists."

Dr. Frank said he was disturbed by accumulating evidence of "a determination to intimidate the free press of the country by such terroristic methods."

Part of the evidence, he declared, was an order by President Roosevelt authorizing the lobby committee to examine the income tax returns of virtually any individual or corporation it desires. The order was issued under the power of a senate resolution passed almost three years ago for an entirely different purpose, he said.

Examining Books
The former Wisconsin University president added at a press conference that men who said they were from the Bureau of Internal Revenue "came in and looked over the books" of the magazine company about two or three weeks ago. He said he presumed this was one of the regular investigations made for income tax purposes, but that he believed the committee had access to the reports.

Dr. Frank declared Chairman Minton (Dem., Ind.) of the committee was so determined to silence criticism of the New Deal and of himself, "that he now apparently intends to use the blanket authority conferred on the lobby committee to harass and intimidate the press."

"The American people had better awaken," he continued, "for as the emergency court said two years ago a free press stands as one of the great interpreters between the government and the people, adding: 'To allow it to be fettered is to fetter ourselves.'"

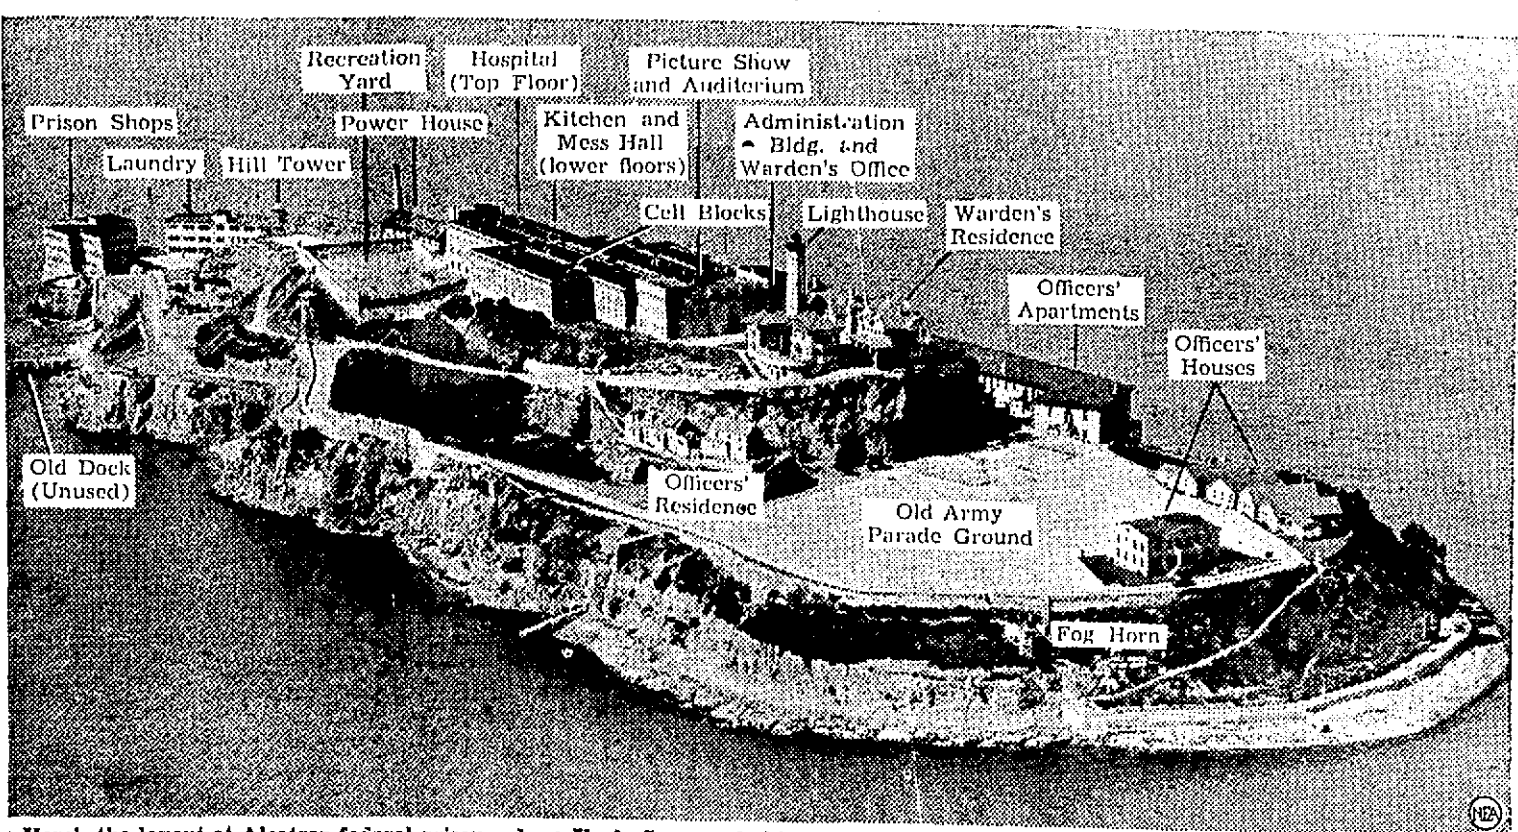

'Air Republican Views'
After Dr. Frank had attempted several times to make a statement at Friday's session of the Lobby Committee, Senator Schwelienbach (Dem., Wash.) of the committee told him:

"This committee doesn't intend to permit you to use this as a forum to air your Republican views."

Dr. Frank had asked as a "citizen and taxpayer" for the right to make a statement.

"I understand that you don't want any statement of the facts in this investigation," he told the committee when it recessed without calling him to the stand.

Ban Congressman From Jersey City

Jerry O'Connell Asks U. S. Protection for Proposed Speech

JERSEY CITY, N. J. (AP)—A congressman, headed here with a colleague to speak in defiance of Mayor Frank Hague, Friday sought federal agents to protect them against a threatened mob of war veterans.

Public Safety Director Daniel J. Casey said the threat was "merely made by an over-enthusiastic veteran who was imbued with an ardent desire to prevent the congressman from speaking."

Casey repeated that police would not permit Representatives Jerry O'Connell (Dem., Mont.) and John T. Baranoff (Far. La., Minn.) to speak in Jersey City Saturday night.

The Hudson County Committee for Labor Defense and Civil Rights, which had applied for a permit to hold the meeting in Journal Square, announced it received a letter from Casey saying it "could not be granted until full information regarding the meeting had been obtained, along with the names of speakers and the names and addresses of committee officers."

William Peterson, publicity chairman of the committee, said it had sent a reply to Casey listing the speakers, but had not included the names and addresses of the officers.

Relief Estimate Is Hiked 300 Pct.

Hopkins Tells Congress New Figure Will Be Three Billions

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress learned Saturday from Works Progress Administrator (WPA) Hopkins that the government's relief program may cost 3 billion dollars for the next fiscal year instead of the 1 billion originally estimated by the Budget Bureau.

Hopkins disclosed that he is preparing for a peak load of 3,000,000 relief clients next winter.

House proponents of the wage and hour legislation, jubilant over the success of their petition to take the bill from the rules committee, demanded Saturday that the house be allowed to consider the measure without further delay.

There was considerable doubt that the rules committee would give the bill preferential status, thereby delaying until May 22 at least consideration of the bill by the house.

The Incurables From Other Prisons Just Numbered 'Rock'

Life Is Grim Routine, But How They Live It Is Told by Ex-Guard A. R. Archer

This is the first of three stories on "Guarding Alcatraz," written by Capt. A. R. Archer, former guard on "The Rock."

By CAPT. A. R. ARCHER
(Former Guard at Alcatraz Prison)
SAN FRANCISCO.—"If any of 'em start to go, shoot twice and then holler 'halt!' It is a lieutenant of the guard talking over the telephone line from his office to the tower overlooking the recreation yard at Alcatraz prison, known to every criminal as "The Rock."

Those few clipped words show why convicts hate and fear "The Rock," No. 1 penitentiary of the United States. They suggest the methods that have made this island prison, jutting out of San Francisco bay, as nearly escape-proof as any prison in the world.

Toughest of All
Twelve acres of wind-swept rock above the chilly waters show the passing ferry passenger little but a lighthouse at the eastern end, the tall stack of the powerhouse, and the somber-hued prison that clings to the top-most pinnacle. Below all this, barred behind concrete and tool-proof steel, always under the muzzles of pistols, rifles and machine-guns, more than 350 men pass the days. Every one of them has been sent from another prison where experience has shown them to be either personally incorrigible, or disturbing elements.

It is a drab, grim life, yet men live it and keep their reason. Tales of prisoners going insane are exaggerated. It is true that some have. Some feign insanity to get transferred to another prison.

A few have actually "gone off their topper." One such was Joe Bowers, No. 219, who climbed a fence by the incinerator and was immediately shot. His body plunged 75 feet to the water below. Another "con" took off his clothes in the recreation yard and did a "fan dance" until carried inside the cellhouse.

Capture Just a "Con"
The grim routine is the same for all. Alcatraz is one prison that is "con-proof," that is, the guard force cannot be bribed or otherwise wheedled into granting favors. There is nothing at all to stories that Al Capone, Alcatraz's most famous prisoner, wears silk underwear, smokes 50-cent cigars, or has special meals served in his cell.

Capone wears prison underwear, smokes a corncob pipe, eats the same beans as the rest of the prisoners. He wears a No. 35 sewed on his clothes, and gets no special privileges.

He takes setting-up exercises in his cell every morning, and was in excellent physical condition the last time I saw him. He plays the guitar, mandolin in the prison band, and writes music in his cell in the evenings.

Grim Routine
One day is much like another on "The Rock." At 6:45 every morning the lieutenant of the guard taking over the day watch sits at his desk, back to the wall, facing all doors and windows, a practice found wisest in prison administration. He checks over the count of prisoners.

The prisoners, having breakfasted, are in their cells waiting the signal to go to their eight hours of daily work. Guards stand at the end of each gallery of cell tiers, facing the lieutenant, or "Bull of the Woods," as he is known. At his signal, a huge Zeppelin's Fate Up to the U. S. A.

Hugo Eckner Comes Here to Plead for Helium Gas Supply

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The future of lighter-than-air transportation, in the opinion of Dr. Hugo Eckener, world's foremost dirigible expert, depends entirely on the United States government. He came here Friday, saluted by the United States navy, to plead directly with leaders of the administration in Washington for helium—the non-explosive gas over which the United States has a monopoly.

"Our newest airship, the LZ-130, is completed except for inflation," said Eckener, president of the board of the German Zeppelin Transportation Company. "But the LZ-130 never will fly unless it is filled with helium."

"Do you know, it is just a year ago today that the Hindenburg, filled with hydrogen, burned at Lakehurst. Such a disaster never will happen again. If we do not get helium, there will be no more Zeppelins. I pray and hope and believe the United States government will let us buy the helium we need."

He will go to Washington next week in an effort to talk to responsible officials. If possible, he said, he would like to talk to President Roosevelt, "who you know has been interested and sympathetic."

"If political reasons are responsible for our failure to obtain helium," said Eckener, "I shall be greatly surprised, for the airship should never be the victim of political circumstances. The Graf Zeppelin, the Hindenburg, all my ships, they have always been an aid in friendly relations among nations."

Ex-Gov. Oldham Is Dead at Age of 72

In 1913 He Disputed Governorship With J. Marion Futrell

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—William Kavanaugh Oldham, 72, who served briefly as acting governor of Arkansas for a few months in 1913, after Governor Joe T. Robinson was elected to the United States senate, died at a hospital here Friday night after a week's illness.

Following the resignation of Governor Robinson, Mr. Oldham figured in one of the most spectacular incidents in the state's political history when he and J. Marion Futrell, then a state senator, both claimed the office of governor.

The state had no lieutenant governor at the time and the constitution provided that the president of the senate should succeed the governor in case of a vacancy.

Airmail Week Is Topic for Rotary

Rev. Thomas Brewster Speaks at Lameheon Club Friday

National Airmail week, May 15-21, was explained by the Rev. Thomas Brewster in a speech to Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Preliminary to the possible introduction of "gathering lines" serving the smaller cities and towns, there will be a nation-wide pickup of airmail at places like Hope on Thursday, May 19, the speaker said. The volume of mail reported on that day will have a bearing on what future routes may be established, and the Rev. Mr. Brewster urged heavy local use of airmail for that day.

A special Hope rubber-stamp has been designed and will be given the local postoffice to make cancellations on all airmail dispatched through this office May 19, the speaker said.

C. C. Spragins returned to Rotary as a member Friday.

A guest of the club was W. H. O'Dell, Botanist of Bloomington, Ill.

A Special "Week" With Merit

BACK during World war days, this country discovered a new way to promote worthy causes. A special date would be set aside—sometimes one day, sometimes a whole week—with the idea that the particular worthy cause involved would be promoted, emphasized and appealed for by all and sundry on that occasion.

It worked—until every commercial publicity and promotion man in the nation began to appreciate the idea. Then we got a series of Big Red Apple Days, Eat More Legumes Weeks, and so on, and the idea went pretty stale.

But it still has its points, when a really good cause is involved; and you might pay a little special attention to the week of May 1-8, which has been set aside as Better Parenthood Week.

Child Health Day, for a number of years, has been observed on the first of May. Mother's Day, this year, falls on May 8. To the editor of the Parents' Magazine there occurred the idea of combining the two dates to stress the whole general subject of better care for children and better protection for mothers.

THAT this is a subject which badly needs emphasizing is all too obvious. Parents' Magazine, for instance, points out that each year—in these civilized United States—150,000 mothers and babies die from causes that might have been prevented if proper care had been available.

These figures mean, first, that we are shockingly remiss in the matter of providing the right sort of attention for women in childbed. The medical skill, dietetic knowledge and pre-natal guidance which would reduce our maternity death rate to a fraction of its present level are available—that is, they are in existence. But somehow they don't get to all the women who need them. A tragic annual sacrifice is the result.

Secondly, the figures mean that a great number of babies who might be saved are lost every year because the care that would save them is not made available. There can be no more pitiful toll than this. To be able to save babies from death, and yet to let the mother—no nation which does that on the scale that we do it can feel anything but the profoundest shame.

NOW these, as it happens, are not things that will right themselves if we give plenty of time. Mothers and babies who might live will continue to die, year after year, unless we force ourselves to realize how inexcusable our neglect is, and do something about it. It is not a matter of finding new knowledge or developing new scientific skills; the knowledge and the skills are at hand, and we need only to make sure they are used.

If the observance of Better Parenthood Week this year compels us to recognize this problem and to take steps to solve it, the week will be time well spent indeed.

Ex-Globe-Trotter

"FREE as a king." The phrase hasn't been used in a serious sense for a long time now.

How about "Free as an ex-king"? That must have seemed a good, realistic figure of speech to the Duke of Windsor at the beginning of 1937. Does it mean anything? Well, yes and no. Yes, a while ago. No, now.

The Duke of Windsor, for years royalty's No. 1 globe-trotter, is forced to travel more and more by armchair and book. It seems a man can't convince anybody he isn't king any more.

Windsor lived in Austria for a while. But now such a thing might be interpreted as a friendly British gesture toward Nazism. He can't go to Italy for similar reasons, and of course Spain just now is out of the question. Also, you learn, there are "a number of countries in Central and Eastern Europe" where the political situation just doesn't quite permit his present. Soviet Russia might as well not exist for him.

So France must continue to be his European stamping ground, at least for a while. Excepting, of course, Paris, for a few days this summer when the King and Queen will be there.

Somebody ought to write a story called "The Ex-Prince and the Pauper."

The Health Practices of Teachers

(This is the second of a series of three articles by Dr. Fishburn on the health of teachers.)

In a study of the health conditions among teachers in the United States, the National Education Association has given special attention to the health practices with teachers follow as a means of maintaining their health in the best possible condition.

Investigators went at the subject from a lot of different points of view. They issued a questionnaire containing 17 health habits, asking the teachers to indicate which one of these habits they themselves followed. Here are the 17 health habits about which the inquiry was made.

Each teacher was asked:

- 1—Do you follow a regular daily routine in work, play and sleep?
- 2—Do you select foods to obtain a balanced diet?
- 3—Do you get plenty of sleep?
- 4—Do you eat meals with regularity?
- 5—Do you clean your teeth regularly?
- 6—Do you maintain wide interests and engage in varied activities?
- 7—Do you call a doctor promptly if the need arises?
- 8—Do you spend considerable time outdoors?
- 9—Do you drink plenty of water?
- 10—Do you take daily exercise?
- 11—Do you always wash your hands before eating?
- 12—Do you avoid the common drinking cup?
- 13—Do you allow for a period of relaxation during the day?
- 14—Do you allow sufficient time for eating?
- 15—Do you avoid the use of a common towel?
- 16—Do you avoid haste and hurry?
- 17—Do you regulate your clothing to changes in temperature?

The 10 errors most commonly noted in health practices among 5000 teachers were the following:

- 1—Insufficient drinking water.
- 2—Insufficient exercise.
- 3—Insufficient fresh air.
- 4—Habitual use of patent medicines.
- 5—Excess sugars in the diet.
- 6—Excess sugars in the diet.

There Will Also Be Some Prime Pumping

6—Use of tobacco.
7—Insufficient or disturbed sleep.
8—Unsatisfactory conditions of employment.
9—Insufficient recreation.
10—Rapid eating.

The correction of these obvious errors in personal hygiene indicates the fundamental rules which teachers should follow in order to live a hygienic existence. In the next article in this series these rules for health will be published.

According to one authority, the 10 most important trees in the world are, in the order named: date palm, coconut palm, almond, apple, fig, mulberry, olive, lemon, cinchona, and rubber.

Strong Character Rests on Keystone of "Spunk"

(No. 34)

Now we approach the acme of all things in child development, the making of character. It is a fallacy to think that character, as we know it, is an enemy to real happiness. "Strength" of character if ingrained early becomes a natural condition. No natural condition makes people unhappy. It is the struggle to be something we are not that develops strain. If we are truly strong and fine, we never have ourselves to fight.

The first ingredient necessary to that compound recipe we call character, is spunk. The highest praise we can give an adult or a child is to say he is a real sport. What do we mean by that? Just that he can take it, come rain or fair weather, without feeling abused, and what is more, forget and begin again.

Little children need warmth and sympathy. I have not forgotten that I have said to you, mother, to comfort your hurt child or the mistreated one. But when babyhood is past, then he must learn gradually that his hurts are merely incidental. Part of your sympathy will do better by turning his eyes away from his troubles, or from enlarging them or dramatizing them.

Kay is not asked to a party. She won't be asked to a lot of parties during her lifetime. Maybe she is too old or too young to fit in, or maybe she is not exactly "on rapport" with the hosts.

Please don't get all hurt and bothered by it, mother. And if you are, don't let your girl see it.

Smile if you can and say, "Kay, go over and see sick little Muriel. She is so fond of you. Read her a story." And next week why not have a party and invite the neglected one? Maybe she will come. Maybe not. But whatever happens, do not permit her oversight to rankle.

Perhaps Jack has failed in his lessons. His hurt is again yours. Don't scold as you may be tempted to do, through sheer disappointment, but explain that Daddy did not pass his Civil Service for landscape engineer, but yet went out and changed his own rose garden. It was so beautiful that Mr. Able came one day and asked him to take charge of his big greenhouses. Help Jack to a new determination to try again.

The foundation of character is ability to take disappointments without humiliation or rancor. Read the lives of most successful men and women. They seldom took time to be slighted or disappointed over failure in themselves. Handicaps spurred them on.

The growing child, wisely advised, can be diverted from overly-keen feeling. I think that sometimes, if accepted ideals in child training stressed this sort of stamina, and emphasized less the principle of removing all possible stones from the path, our problem children might be fewer. It is a point to consider.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

Here's A Pleasant Murder Mystery

For a truly pleasant and ingenuously mysterious story, I refer you to Nard Jones' newest book, "The Case of the Hanging Lady" (Dodd, Mead, $2). Mr. Jones scorns the frantic, ransacking-for-evidence devices that so many mystery writers resort to and contents himself with the telling, straight story about a murder—or several murders, to be exact—which puzzled people until the murderer was uncovered; the result is a first-rate yarn.

The scene is a vast coast yacht club, where a blond entity is found hanging from the yard arm of a gentleman's private yacht. A tired business man commences undertakes to get to the bottom of things, encounters two more murders en route, skirts the edges of a love affair with a lady 30 years his junior, and comes to the surface triumphantly, at last, with the slayer (so to speak) in his teeth. All in all, it's a very good story.

By contrast, there is "The Mystery of the Painted Nude," by William Gore (Crime Club; $2). Mr. Gore resorts to the elaborate trappings which Mr. Jones gets along without. That is, the "One thing at a time" he reminded. "Maybe my oxygen tube will spring a leak, or my body expand to the bursting point. . . ."

"Roger!"

"Well, I was only trying to be helpful." She must like him a little bit, the way she had reacted to that.

"You ought to be ashamed to say such things!" She looked as though she would like to slap him again. Then as suddenly her eyes turned stony, her lips tremulous, she was all tender femininity and yielding sweetness, as unthinkingly she caught his arm, pressing close to him again, "You didn't mean it! It's not that risky!" She was seized with that unexplainable panic once again, that sickening emptiness.

"I was kidding," he said lightly. But he put his two hands on her shoulders and pushed her gently from him.

Whew! He'd rather do any number of test-dives, climb to any stratospheric heights, than have Jackie, looking like that, so unbecomingly close, yet so unattainably far from him.

She sank back, releasing another big sigh. Relief flooded through her, as though she had been made whole again. "Who is this wonderful Santa Claus?" she murmured. "You didn't tell me his name, Roger. Or anything about him."

"Didn't I?" Roger laughed. "It isn't a mister, Jackie, at all. This happens to be Mrs. Santa Claus. Mrs. Beryl Melrose, to be exact."

"Mrs. Beryl Melrose," Jackie repeated.

But the name did not mean anything to her then.

Stamp News

POSTMASTER General James A. Farley has announced the issuance of a new 6-cent airmail postage stamp in connection with the celebration of National Airmail Week, May 15-21. The stamp will be placed on first-day sale at Dayton, Ohio, and St. Petersburg, Fla., May 14, and it will be placed on general sale the following day or as soon after as possible.

Dayton and St. Petersburg were selected as first-day cities because of their close association with early aviation history.

Dates and places of first-day sale for the first four stamps of the new regular series have also been decided. They follow: the 1-cent Washington issue, Washington, D. C., April 25; 1/2-cent Martha Washington issue, Washington, D. C., May 5; 1/2-cent Benjamin Franklin issue, Philadelphia, May 19, and the 2-cent John Adams stamp, Washington, D. C., June 3.

The 1-cent George Washington stamp will be printed in green ink with a flat background and no border. It is arranged vertically and is being printed in sheets of 100 by rotary process. The likeness of Washington in profile is shown in the left corner of the stamp, facing right.

Stamp collectors desiring first-day cancellations on April 25 may send in excess of 10 addressed covers to the postmaster at Washington, D. C., with a cash or postal money order remittance to cover only the cost of the stamps requiring affixing. Each cover should bear a pencil endorsement in the upper right corner to show the number of stamps to be affixed. Collectors should submit orders for the one stamp ONLY, as first-day covers for each of the new regular series are to be handled separately.

To commemorate the inaugural airmail flights May 3 from White Horse to Juncos and from White Horse to Fairbanks, the Canadian postoffice will issue special cachets. Address Postmaster at White Horse, Yukon Territory (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

Monoring Mother's Day

Back of every achievement
Is a mother's face
Back of every great deed
Is a mother's prayer.
Back of every here
Who wins a hard-fought race—
Look! You'll find
A Mother there!—Selected.

Mother's Day—its origin—On May 8th, the second Sunday in May, we will celebrate Mother's Day once again. For her honor, for her memory, for her hope will turn out Sunday to pay her tribute. Sunday's march to church will be a triumphal and colorful march, red roses will adorn the breasts of those who can count mother as a reality, and white ones will be worn as a symbol of her memory. It will be a day for home comings and a day of remembrance, serious thought. Mother's Day was originated by Miss Anne Jarvis of Philadelphia on May 9th, 1907, on that date at the suggestion of Miss Jarvis, who desired to pay a tribute to her mother, who was much loved in her home town, the thought occurred to Miss Jarvis that since all people owed a tremendous debt of gratitude to their mothers it would be a wonderful idea to set aside a particular day in the year dedicated to Mother. And so on May 9th, 1907 all the churches and various associations in Philadelphia co-operated in putting on a Mother's Day program. In May 1914, Congress passed a resolution officially designating the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day, and if by any chance you have failed to join in Mother's Day observance, by all means start this year and pay your full measure of filial respect, reverence and remembrance to your Best Friend—Your Mother.

At the Saenger

Robert Taylor

Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford," supported by a group of film personalities who have achieved fame both here and abroad, including Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan, and such stellar British players as Vivien Leigh, Edmund Gwenn and Griffith Jones, comes to the Rialto for a preview at 11 o'clock Saturday night, and then transfers to the Saenger Sunday and Monday.

It is a unusual story of the experiences of an American college boy placed in the unfamiliar environment of an English university.
Based on an original story by Leon Gordon, Sidney Gilliat and Michael Hogan and on a idea by John Monk Saunders and directed by Jack Conway who gave the screen such hits as "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Libeled Lady," the new Taylor picture has the distinction of being photographed in England against the authentic Oxford backgrounds.

The story begins with Taylor's departure for England, having received a scholarship for Oxford. His arrival there, his difficulties in adjusting himself to the customs and traditions of a university far different from the college he has left behind, his feud with a rival undergraduate and his subsequent romance with this rival's sister, make a narrative which holds excellent humor, novelty and a sympathetic unfolding of characterizations.
The picture is given added excitement in its depiction of such thrilling athletic episodes as an intercollegiate relay race, the quaint English "jumping" races and the colorful "Cambridge" crew race in which Taylor's prowess as the Oxford stroke aids in winning him the sympathy of his fellow students.

At the Rialto

Richer in flavor even than the shrewd Yankee horse trader of "David Harum," the Iowa farmer of "State Fair," or the wise and patient Western of "They Had to See Paris," "Judge Priest," the drawing but quick-witted southern jurist created by Irvin S. Cobb is a memorable addition to Will Rogers' gallery of "Representative Americans."
With Rochelle Hudson, Tom Brown, Anita Louise and Stepin Fetchit featured in the cast of the screen play by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti, "Judge Priest" is at the Rialto theater Sunday, with Will Rogers starred in the title role of the Twentieth-Century Fox picture.

The star's portrayal of the beloved judge has the mark of a authenticity upon it. It is a notable folk-portrait, just as his other characterizations have been, a unique blending of a splendid talent with a rich and splendid role. But more than that it stands alone for sheer dramatic power. Seldom has Rogers had such opportunities as this role affords for calling both tears and laughter from his audience.
John Ford directed the film, which was produced by Sol M. Wurtzel.

"Write Mother Before It Is Too Late," and his choir will bring as an anthem, "My Mother's Bible."
Sermon themes for both the morning and evening worship services are appropriate for the day when we pay honor to our mothers. In the morning service the pastor will speak on "The Faith of Our Mothers," and in the evening service, beginning at 7:45, on "The Bible—The Word of God."
During the past week the church has been rearranged and the worship room furnished with a beautiful new carpet, the gift of the Ladies' Aid Society.

You are cordially invited to worship with us both morning and evening this Sunday and every Sunday.

"New" Sunday

Deanna Durbin, star of Universal's "100 Men and a Girl"

At the New
Deanna Durbin, who arose to screen fame in "Three Smart Girls," will be starred in her second picture, Universal's "100 Men and a Girl," a comedy drama with music which opens Sunday at the New theater. Featured with Dianna Durbin is Leopold Stokowski, famous conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony.

An unusual cast surrounds Deanna. Adolphe Menjou is seen as her father, a musician who, with 100 fellow artists, seeks recognition of talent and a chance for a livelihood. Alice Brady portrays a society matron who promises Deanna to sponsor the orchestra. Then the rich woman flounders off to Europe and leaves Menjou and Deanna in the lurch.

Eugene Pallette, as Alice Brady's husband, has the situation placed squarely before him on his shiny mahogany desk by Deanna Durbin. Her eloquent statement of the 100 men's dilemma causes him to agree to sponsor the orchestra, providing Stokowski will conduct it.

Nothing daunted, Deanna goes to Stokowski. She charms him first with her singing. He agrees to hear the orchestra and finds they are excellent musicians. Then the story sweeps to its climax, carrying human drama, delightful comedy and memorable music to a rhythmic crest. Stokowski has devised a new method of recording music, which gives the effect of sound in perspective.

But this chronicle would not be complete without noting the wild untrammeled presence of Misha Auer, the mad merry musician of the Muscovites, in "100 Men and a Girl." He makes flutes flutter, tubas twitter and cellos shun.

The same pair who made "Three Smart Girls," director Henry Koster and associate producer Joseph Pasternak, turned out this offering from the screen play by Bruce Manning, Charles Kenyon, and Hans Kroy. Charles R. Rogers was the executive producer.

While the dispute was pending before the supreme court both men set up offices at the Capitol and each claimed to be acting governor. By mutual agreement they took no action as officials until the case was settled.

The high court ruled in favor of Futrell and Oldham accepted the decision and withdrew from the Capitol. Nineteen years later Futrell was elected governor.

The incorrigibles

gong rings, and as the last sound dies away, the guards on the cello galleries step off down the rows, counting the prisoners who stand just inside the doors.

As each guard finishes his count he calls it off to the lieutenant below, who checks it off on a "count sheet" before him. If it checks, "Count's O.K.," he announces, and blows a whistle. Guards relax, prisoners lie down.

By telephone the "Bull" checks with guards outside in the recreation yard. "Is it too foggy to see the fence?" he may ask. "O. K. Keep on your toes. I'm sending 'em out now."

The whistle blows again and the cellhouse echoes to the clang of the safety locking device opening the steel cell doors. The "cons" line up against their cells.

A guard at the rear of the cellhouse adjusts the "Snitch Box" or "Mechanical Snitch," and each prisoner passes between the two box-like structures which register electrically when any metal object passes between them. It is not infallible, but it certainly is a big help to the guards in detecting the possible concealed weapons. The prisoners fear and hate it as they do everything else on "The Rock."

Off to Work
Now they march down a short flight of steps and into the recreation yard, where they line up again according to work detail.

Shoe and carpenter shops, tailors and woodworkers, cleaners and pressers, blacksmiths and machinists, and the largest of them all, the laundry detail, line up in semi-military style.

Armed guards control every inch of the work area, pacing back and forth on the roofs and towers, with pistols, gas guns, Springfield rifles, and Browning automatics always at hand.

The "cons" march off to the shops, each group with its own guards. The wind whistles and whistles around their gray-clad shoulders. The guards on the catwalks outside the guard towers lean forward into the wind like those stage comedians who have their shoes nailed to the floor.

The hoot of whistles and the endless shuttling of berryboats are all that marks the passage of time on a Rock where time has a different meaning.

Don't Buy Complexion, Eat It, Chemists Say

The home garden is no friend of the beauty specialist where complexion is concerned, scientists tell us, because the properly balanced diet containing vitamin and mineral fresh vegetables will give nature its chance to do what was intended, bring health to the body, and with it, a good complexion.

Vegetables are not the only foods to produce such results, of course, but they are the "deficiency" types which supply the hidden food elements lacking in so many modern table delicacies. The fact that they are grown at home and can be used fresh from the garden without the loss brought about by being kept out of the ground, makes them doubly valuable for the health and complexion seeker.

The Man With the Hoe Says

Petunias will grow in any man's garden or window box. On poor soil or good, in the dirtiest city or the freshest countryside, they provide a magnificent sheet of blossoms, which seem to never quit until Jack Frost bites real hard.

They like sun, will thrive in good soil, well moistened. Don't crowd them. Balcony types are fine in boxes. Try some of the giant and ruffled types for the garden. Some of the newest varieties measure almost 6 inches across.

Lay aside material about the house for stakes. You will need them when summer comes and the dahlias or tomatoes require support.
